

Getting Involved in the Writing Community

Presentation by Anastasia Zadeik

Saturday

9/24/22 • 2:30 PM

Community Room

Entertaining, thought-provoking, educational, cathartic—writing and storytelling can make us laugh, cry, heal, and come together to find common ground. This talk will include readings from the work of poets, memoirists, and novelists, as well as information on how local writers and readers can find their place in the vibrant, inclusive, and growing San Diego writing community. The host, Anastasia Zadeik, will also share the story of her publishing journey as part of this community.

Anastasia is the author of Blurred Fates, “a hypnotic page-turner about the frightening haziness between past and present” (KIRKUS REVIEWS). Her work has appeared in The San Diego Decameron Project, LitHub, Literary Vine Review, writeordietribe.com, and Shaking the Tree. Director of Operations for the San Diego Writers Festival, she is also a frequent performer, coach, and board member for So Say We All, a literary nonprofit dedicated to helping people tell their stories—and tell them better [sosayweallonline.com].
